Should only apply to people that actually move further away after getting a child in. If they were more than 1.6km away when they got the 1st child in and did not move home home, or indeed moved closer they should also gain access to the sibling priority.

How has the distance of 1.6km been chosen? As the distance intake for schools varies so widely, this would affect families at different schools very differently. The DfE suggested walking distance for under 8s, though unrealistic in my view, is 2 miles.

I live 1 mile from the school my children went/attend. My eldest child got into the school from our current address (we have never moved) and subsequently her siblings did too which would not be the case if these changes come into effect. So I would agree if people move after getting children into a school but not if they live at the same address.

The phasing in of the idea is only fair as existing children would rightly not expect siblings to be forced to go elsewhere especially with the additional problems faced by multi drops, but after the phasing in stage the rules are clear and people have to bear it in mind when moving away from the catchment area.

My local school is always oversubscribed, this includes siblings who live a considerable distance from the school. I feel that this is unfair as local schools should be for local children. I also think that allowing parents with siblings currently at the school to keep the sibling criteria is fair and correct. I whole heartily approve of this change.

Lots of people rent properties in the area local to a good school, and then they move back again to their permanent homes a year or so later, but are then still able to gain a place for siblings. This is taking places away from local people. This is not fair on the people who have lived near to those schools on a permanent basis and pay the higher rates of council tax etc.

I have noticed a few parents coming in on the trains to Romford from ??, this should not happen due to needs of local children unable to get spaces in local schools. I think that you should also be wary of people that list their parents address in Havering when they are living elsewhere.

The mileage criterion cut off point of 2018 will be too late for some parents who have moved in and bought property in the Borough and are paying local council tax.

Yet they cannot get their children into a school of their choice or all their children into the same school. Due to the fact that the school place has already been allotted and taken by Sibling A/B from outside the Borough. The criterion effect also has to be implemented at secondary level. Otherwise this just pushes the problem further up the school chain at secondary level. Development of housing in Havering has not been match with infrastructure. There is going to be a high demand and fight for school places at all levels in the Borough over the next five years unless Havering starts building schools. The age demographics has changed in Havering over the last 10 years and this should have been planned.

Brilliant idea, I was unable to get any of the schools I selected and I live 0.8 from this particular school. Turns out people with siblings living over 7 miles away still drive to that school not even in the havering area. Their child gets a place because of siblings but they don't live in the area, but are still allocated. Totally unfair on the local residents.

I think it's a good idea as there are lots of families getting a place then moving further away and local children are missing out on spaces.
Although I think it's going to hard to implement as it's impossible to get two children to different schools at the same time.

I believe that the places offered should be on distance and no priority should be given to siblings, there are limited Catholic secondary schools and my child's place could be greatly increased by the new proposals. This system makes it fair to all children applying for a school places. Whilst I appreciate it is extremely difficult to get your children to two different schools, people use the sibling rule to their advantage when considering schools.

Yes but I think it is unfair that my children will have missed out on this opportunity to attend their very local school. My son did not get my first or second choice of schools, even though we live extremely close, because the schools were heavily subscribed with sibling places, of which I am sure a lot are not living as close as us.

With the previous sibling link remaining in place, when my youngest child starts Reception in 2018, my first and second choice schools will still be heavily subscribed with siblings places (again probably not even be living in the area), and I am probably unlikely to get these choices.

I think the link should be broken and residency of current pupils should be addressed. Obviously it's impractical to have more than one child at different schools but at the same time, too often, parents get the school that they want and move away. I believe the criteria for Siblings and Distance should not be fulfilled in that order but looked at together UNTIL the new rule kicks into place which should hopefully eliminate these problems and make school applications fairer and less stressful.

Regards

It makes sense to maintain local communities ties with schools and this is best achieved by allowing more admission spaces to those that live closer to the schools.

I believe some parents deliberately move in to a place closest to good schools to gain admission for their first child and then move away having a guarantee of a place for their other siblings in years to come. This will put other new parents at a disadvantage who live within the catchment area but cant get into good schools.I think the siblings should not be automatically given places unless all the other local children in the area are appropriately placed in their choice of schools.

I agree as a lot of people particularly those that rent move into an area to get a preferred school for their child and then move out of the area once they have a place. This makes it difficult for local residents and people who pay a premium to live near a good school.

It is fairer to offer places to children living closer than to families who move further away after they have got a sibling into the school.

This would stop those that are able to rent in the catchment area to get oldest child into the school and then moving back to the family home further away to get other children in on the sibling rule. Help prevent traffic congestion with most children able to walk to their local school rather than travelling several miles across the Borough or from outside of the Borough. This would also prevent local children from missing out on a place when in previous years the catchment area went out several miles eg Engayne this year, where their subsequent siblings could be admitted before children who live less than a mile away.

I believe that the sibling criterion should cease to apply even if a sibling has been admitted by September 2018. Otherwise, it may take a long time for the new rule to have a practical effect given the possible difference in ages between the eldest and youngest child in the family. In addition, I believe that a similar rule should be applied in secondary schools, where there is no clear case for a sibling criterion given that children should be able to travel to school by themselves, unlike the case for primary schools.

I believe all children should have the opportunity to attend the closest school of their choosing, people moving away and continuing to utilise the sibling link deprives others of this chance.

It is also important to review the sibling criteria for Secondary Schools. Particularly in Upminster where local children of families that do not have siblings but live in Upminster are at risk of not getting the preferred local school because of siblings of families that live in Basildon, Southend and Thurrock. Children who live locally should study together and bond to nurture and build a good community. These families do not live in the local community and just come here take advantages of the local schools.
